Playground by Libbey®

With its juxtaposition of light vs. dark and smooth vs. rough, this avant-garde pattern sets the standard for a unique presentation. A smooth, interior glaze contrasts with a naturally rough exterior for a tactile experience.

Hold It Right There!

While delivery and carryout each have their own unique characteristics, they both have one thing in common – time. Delivery drivers need time to get meals to the front doors of your customers while those ordering takeout need time to make their way to your establishment to pick up their food. From the kitchen to the front door, your dishes should be kept at the proper temperature while in transit or awaiting pickup from customers so they can safely enjoy your creations as if they were sitting at your table.

Make sure you have a properly insulated food carrier that will maintain the right temperature for both hot and cold foods while also protecting them from bacteria and cross contamination.

Equally as important is realizing that there is more than one way to properly hold your food in order to keep it fresh and safe for consumption by diners.
